

starting over... AGAIN

Posted by 5770 - 24 Oct 2011 14:36

I've been on this forum 2 years and I am worse now than I've been for a long time... and that's despite the yom tovim!

Anyway keep up the good work everyone- and wish me luck!

i counted my chickens before they hatched. today was a semi-bad "looking" day.

All these hot super-frum ladies. Drive me crazy, they have NO idea.

I have no confidence in you, at all. Do you have a decent track record? I have no confidence in myself, either. I have a horrible track record, myself. And I've been sober a while. So?

I have confidence in G-d, not you and not me.

If you can beat it yourself, that's great. Feel free to ignore me and my stupid confidence issue, my track record, and your track record. The 12 steps are not a religion, to me, and there is no 'mitzvah' to be powerless.

But if you discover that you are a loser to your lust and have such a pathetic track record that it would be patent stupidity to go with confidence in yourself, then you are like me.

There is a big, Big G-d. For Him it is no contest. But there is a catch, of course:

As the Kotzker said, "He only comes where people let Him in." And that is what recovery is all about. Getting out of his way.

And it beats "not falling" by a light-year, for those who need it.

Hatzlocha!!

To believe that G-d never forsakes anyone, not even ourselves...and to believe that we are worth it, being worth the creating of an entire world....sure. I'm with you, amigo!

It's G-d who does it, not them. But simultaneously, "ein hadovor tolui ella bee!" I am the only one who can surrender to Hashem and let Him in to take care of me. And I can't learn how to do it by myself. I needed to learn how from other drunks on recovery, and still do. I forget so, so easily.
