

On the way to 90 (and Beyond)

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 31 Dec 2008 13:57

Well, I've been clean for 10 days now. Getting through the nights is the most difficult because that is when I've been most likely to fall. On the other hand, my state of mind and the content of my thoughts during the day are the fuel for the fire. If I can control my mind during the day, controlling my body at night is that much easier. Some days have been more difficult, and my coworkers aren't exactly concerned about purity or modesty or any other such thing. G-d willing, I'll make it through today and then get a bit of a break. I have company paid holidays tomorrow and Friday (and at least some of my family will be with me each day). Shabbos has always been easier for me, so it's possible that things will be smoother for four days. I just have to get through today!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 19 Jan 2009 16:34

Happy is your lot, Ben Shel Hashem!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 20 Jan 2009 13:33

It's hard for me to believe, but I completed 30 clean days last night. Yesterday was one of the most difficult days I've had yet. The Y"H was really worked up by the things I described in an earlier post, plus I was approaching a milestone. Last night, before my bedtime Shema, I did some Torah study and spent a little time in hitbodedut (not a common thing for me). Then I spent some time talking to my wife about my struggles over the course of the day. She was very supportive and decided to go to bed at the same time I did (also not a common thing, she's a serious night owl). I ended staying up a little later than I am accustomed to doing, but B"H, I made it. I'm sure the Y"H will attack soon in a fierce way, but at least I know it's coming. I know I have to prepare myself, and I know I can succeed.

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by battleworn - 20 Jan 2009 15:29

Ben Hatzadik, your progress is a tremendous inspiration to me; and I'm sure to many others as well.

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 20 Jan 2009 15:36

This site and chizuk emails have been my inspiration. Too long I tried to fly solo. I tend to be very quiet and stay in the background, so talking to anyone about my struggles had been nearly impossible. B"H for this website. And I'm even more thankful to my wife who has been patient above and beyond anything that anyone could expect.

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 20 Jan 2009 15:51

Wow Ben, Congrats on reaching Level 4. I updated your chart and crowned you with the "Eved hashem" crown!

Keep strong, you are an inspiration to us all!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 22 Jan 2009 19:17

I had a big struggle with depression last night. My family has been observant for only a few years. This past summer we left the town where we became observant (which only had a handful of orthodox families plus the Chabad rabbis) and moved to town with a rather large orthodox community. My wife and children have taken the change very badly and really want to move back. It feels like every time something negative happens that my wife is telling me again that she can't wait to move back. I've promised her that I would do my best, but with the economy it will be difficult; jobs are hard to find these days. I feel under tremendous pressure. When we first moved here my wife was having meltdowns on nearly a daily basis and was threatening to divorce me because I was going forward in my observance and the rest of the family felt that they had already taken on too much. Eventually things settled down (largely due to an antidepressant for my wife), and the divorce threats have gone away. Frankly, though, I am scared what will happen if I am unable to find a new job in the old town when our current lease is up. I was very upset and depressed last night.

There was one positive aspect, though: I felt little to no urge to masturbate. Usually, this would be the most likely circumstance under which I would fall. I don't know why I didn't feel the urge, but I am glad for it because I don't know how well I would have been able to resist. Perhaps Hashem was giving me a break? Perhaps my battle and my extra Torah study are part of it as well. Whatever the case: 32 clean days and counting, B"H.

=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by the.guard - 22 Jan 2009 19:31

ben, 32 is gematria LEV - heart. In this merit, may Hashem give you a new heart to serve him and trust fully in him, no matter what life throws your way. Let go and let G-d. Not just in the addiction, but in all aspects of your life.

=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by strugglingwoman - 22 Jan 2009 20:07

That is an accomplishment!! I too tend to act out when I am depressed and stressed. Letting the fantasy world take over, if only for a few moment, provides temporary relief. The I feel sick when the moment passes. You are doing great!!!

=====

Re: On the way to 90
Posted by BentleyJunkie - 23 Jan 2009 00:32

Ben,

Hashem has the infinite capacity to take on all your worries....Release all of it to HIM and trust HaShem that everything is always for the best! We are tested all the time, not just in shmiras habris. Only through overcoming these tests can we reach our spiritual potential! I try to thank HaShem whenever something comes up that stresses me out or upsets me. Try it!

Btw, I too am a baal teshuva too! Though I don't a family of my own along the ride, I do understand how hard it to deal with others your close to who don't understand why your making these positive changes.

Keep up the good work!

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 25 Jan 2009 15:58

I've now completed 35 cleans days, 5 weeks! The Y"H hasn't given up, of course. Last night I had at least a couple of dreams of a sexual nature, but it was rather odd. Instead of challenging me directly while I'm awake, I was being tested in my dream with a strong desire to masturbate. The other dream I recall was less odd; it was based on memories of an inappropriate relationship in the distant past. It isn't easy dealing with this and the effects of the dreams have been slow to pass. I am still struggling with the urges, but they are slowly diminishing. It is a new week, and with G-d's help, it will hopefully be another week of growth and cleanliness.

=====

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 25 Jan 2009 21:43

Ben, you're doing great!

Our dreams reflect our life. The more we work on not giving in and not looking at what we shouldn't, we will find that in our dreams we also avoid falling and don't want to give in... But this can take much longer to happen in the dreams than it is happening in real life. That's because it takes a long time to change the subconscious.

Keep posting and inspiring us all to be strong!

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by Binyomin5766 - 27 Jan 2009 17:35

Well, another couple of clean days are completed. The Y"H jumped me yesterday, though. I was on my work computer (which I don't have the rights to install blocker software on) and I was doing a search for something I thought would be pareve. B"H, I didn't see any pictures, but the description of the first website on the list was rather bad. I got off that search results page within a few seconds and didn't follow any of the links. It still took several hours for the urges to taper off. Every little battle won is another step forward; every test serves to lift me higher. I have to keep reminding myself; it's for my good, my wife's good, my children's good, and the good of klal Yisrael.

Count = 37 clean days.

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by the.guard - 27 Jan 2009 22:38

Wow, I'm reading these posts of all these close calls and such great spiritual strengths and I'm just shaking my head and thinking how fortunate Hashem is to have such a nation!

I updated you chart. Keep inspiring us!

=====

Re: On the way to 90

Posted by be holy - 28 Jan 2009 05:04

keep going strong ben you are giving the y"h a run for his money. before moshiach comes there will be a global crisis and personal crises. through thick and thin we must fight the y"h as our life depends on it more than ever. the tumah of our generation is the greatest proof mossiach is so close. you pushing the tumah away and hashemkisses you teshuva!! this is what he wants from all of us- keep going and bringing us all nachas.

=====
=====