

I'm about to fall, what should I do?

"I'm about to fall, what should I do?", is probably one of the most asked and answered question on this site in one form or another. Here is a great answer that not only shows one idea of what to do, but the dedication and work that this simple program requires.

Hello friends,

I just wanted to share that I was so close to falling recently that I am considering it a miracle that I didn't. I was starting to slip - very bad, then realized that I had not yet used the 'Taphsic' fence. I quickly charted down a bunch of 'fences' and then started acting on them. The whole (before) chores took me about 2 to 3 hours to complete, there were times there when I forgot I was in the middle of a huge struggle, and there were times when I could have said I had already fallen. After I finished all the chores I had written for myself, I was so, so close to falling. Just then some friends hurried in and pulled me out of the icy water. They arrived much earlier than expected, and I really feel that it was HASHEM telling me that I did my best and that it was time for him to throw in a net.

As far as Halocha goes one is not permitted to touch himself in the shower. At all.

I heard from a Rabbinical source that one should not look at himself in the shower. From my own experience looking at myself in the shower may eventually lead to acting out down the road.

I personally try as much as I can to shower in the mikvah (even though I'm not Chassidish). There's much less of a challenge to deal with if you're in public.

As for trying to call a theoretical GYE 911 when you're already in the shower, in the struggle - I agree it can be much harder. I would use this type of service if I was in a struggle and I managed to fight myself out of the shower for a few minutes and was still fighting to get back into the shower and finish.

I keep my phone in the shower, so if I start getting tempted I can make a call and electrocute myself. The shock usually takes away the desire. You may be thinking that a cell phone doesn't shock you when it gets wet. That is normally true but I have a special APP called lustshock. I wanted to try a hair dryer, but I was told it could kill me.

I don't know if this would work - But I wish that when I was about to fall, I could call a GYE emergency phone service - a moderator or someone would answer and ask what the emergency is. Given the information, the moderator would give the 'struggler' a series of steps to do and perhaps stay with him on the line until his urge dies down. I think it's harder to focus
