Day 60. I went to my first sa meeting today it went gr8 bh . I feel as if I got of a huge burden of my shoulders. I'm no longer alone in this horrible struggle. I met a lot of people who I would never imagine would be struggling with lust (chasidish, litvish. Yeshiva bochurim....) I'm thankful to hashem for directing me to such a wonderful group and giving me such an awesome family like gye!!!!

Day 63. Today was overall a good day. I went to a meeting today but I felt different then I felt last time. The thrill seemed to burn out and I started facing reality that I'm a real addict like all those sick people in the room. It's very hard for me to accept that fact and I'm feeling very down and depressed.

Ok cord' relax, not "Everyone" is sick

Rabbi Twersky has been going to meetings for 50 years, and he's not firstly, I'm relaxed.

Secondly, it's not for you to answer for his words.

For years we have made decision to be an addict, now we may need equal or greater time to reverse the decision. We are making a new path, the other one is cleared and we need to make this new one more desirable than that old path.

I can totally relate to this. I am thankful to Hashem for every day of cold weather, as it has been here recently (though it's supposed to be 60 degrees Fahrenheit this shabbos). Keep up the Shmiras Einayim and you should be okay!

Have a great Shabbos.
