

Here goes

I've recently joined GYE. Until now, though I realised that I had a problem, I tried other ways to solve it, with varying degrees of success. But I've failed one too many times, and now I am going to get through with this properly, Be'ezras Hashem.

I don't know how well I will update my journey. I am committed to ninety clean days, but I'm not 100% committed to journaling it. I do know that I produce better results when I am accountable to others, so I'd love to hear some feedback from some of you out there.

Thank you.

So you don't really have a filter?

I have what to say on the comparisons and contrast between lust and alcohol. I once asked Dov for several sentences on it. Regardless, it is not good for my sobriety to delve into this right now, so I will let others debate it to death.
