Feeling a bit ill now, so taking it easy in bed rather than going to shiur. However, I'm still feeling some taiva from last night, and ideally I would try to keep myself occupied if I wasn't ill.

Looks like it's gonna be a tough day

Staying busy is always good. Staying alone with your thoughts, not so much.

Keep up the good work!!

Hang in there.

The real you wants to be clean.

The real you doesn't want to have to pick up the pieces and recommit....that THIS time things will be different.

The real you knows what will truly cause you more pain.

The real you is inside of you right now too. Hear it out.

Maybe try to break the day into smaller increments and focus on each on at a time. Looking ahead at a whole day in bed feeling icky, and still being clean is intimidating.

But if I was this awesome dude called "Looking_to_improve"...I wouldn't be intimidated.

Ive been following you on this forum for awhile now, and it's so good to see you doing this well! Keep it up! Stick to your plan, try to avoid looking at things you shouldn't, be very careful with how you deal with emotions that could lead to feeling the urge, and don't forget we are all here to support you no matter what happens!

LookingToImprove, maybe it is time to start mentoring someone. You have enough experience to be able to validate another guy's feelings of yi'ush etc. At the same time you can share your successes which have been real and consistent. Guys won't be intimidated by you because you are still struggling too. The benefits to you are twofold. One - As you share chizuk and advice, you will find that all that you have learned about these inyonim will become clearer to you as you verbalize it in your own style. Second - Knowing that your "talmid/chaver" is observing you, creates a mechayev to stay clean. You will be thinking, "I can't fall - what effect will it have on him?"

Makes sense?

Perhaps, but seems like a lot of pressure. I'm happy to be in contact with guys my age, but I'm more hesitant to play a mentor role. Also I don't think I'm fully in a healthy place yet (although maybe you are davka telling me now regardless)
