

Falling On sundays!

Posted by Mo613 - 11 Apr 2021 21:27

Hey guys,

i need some advice. I been realizing a pattern, i keep on falling every Sunday. I have a filter and everything but some how i get around it. What do i do?

Is it just the name sunday? Is it because of boredom, waking up late? Tired?

Hard to know because I don't know so much about you and what you do on sundays but my guess is you fall because your bored - while most days are full with either work/school/yeshiva or some other combo and shabbos is shabbos, sunday is kinda the empty day where theres a ton of time and not always enough to do to fill the time.

So my advice: fill the time.

Ideally fill it with Torah because that always leaves you feeling good after and your learning something too. What I find helpful is different podcasts (because I don't have to do much) or "light" english sefarim which don't need much investment because I find these things easier and can easily spend hours and hours on them. Otherwise do a project - clean your workspace or work out or whatever (your choice) just ideally something that will leave you feeling good afterwards vs feeling nasty. For me something that would leave me feeling nasty is watching TV/playing video games because I don't feel productive afterwards and I realized i pretty much just wasted my time.

Maybe try this tool. For some people it works wonders!

You can also try having your internet be shut off completely on sunday during the hours you are worried about. I'm not sure how to do it but some people have tried it (like to block their internet entirely late at night) and it helped.
