The ultimate goal of farming is not the growing of crops, but the cultivation and perfection of human beings

Welcome to the family!

It truly takes a lot of courage to come on here.

Shkoyach! Very impressive.

It might help to tell us abit about your journey thus far and what you are currently struggling with so the chevra here can try giving some pointed eitza.

You can check out my PM to you.

Hatzlocha,

YeshivaGuy

Welcome! Hatzlacha!

There are plenty of amazing resources here (see captains signature above for some) make sure to use them!

Does your farm have animals or only crops?

I hope you have animals also, otherwise the guys here are gonna be pretty upset...

so I fell today story was that I was unwell (virus going around yeshiva) and missed a family simcha last night so I was in quite a bad mood in bed all day and I'm stam lacking motivation the past few days since I was having a perfectly clean elul and then I fell a few days ago on a fully tagged flip phone so not only was I lacking motivation I also had someone to blame instead of looking to see how I can correct myself

You are working hard to take yourself out of an extremely difficult set of circumstances. Your desire to improve and awareness that you are not fully where you want to be are great steps in the right direction. Don't let the fact that it's Rosh HaShana tomorrow take away from your progress and motivation. It's NEVER too late to get right back up and keep fighting. I believe in you fully. You really CAN and WILL succeed in this battle. It'll be tough and you will face challenges, but I know you are capable of mustering your strength and pulling through. Be proud of yourself for being self-aware enough to realize your problem and be working for a solution. Keep going, and don't mind the proximity to Rosh HaShana. Keep it up and I want to hear great accomplishments from you!! Shana Tova!! A year of success and freedom for you and all of us!!!!
