Had same experience just now, this gives me encouragement to continue (not just starting over) as well

What's the question, of course we care! I would just rephrase that, you are not starting over, all the hard work you put in, all the pure and clean days, none of them disappeared just because you fell. They are yours forever and ever, and beH you'll add plenty more in the coming days and years:) Keep trucking!

The thing is I'm not sure myself what I did wrong/ didn't do right that day cuz I was in some weird mood then don't know how to explain it.

@bisyata Dishmaya,

Yidden like you are a true inspiration. Hashem only tests you cos HE believes in you. Don't dwell on the fall, getting up now may be the catalyst for tremendous groeth much greater than before

I don't know the answer but I am posting what my Techloq filter says when I try to go into bard. It seems like you have a very good question for which the answer would probably be insufficient. I am not familiar with Netfree and I don't know whether there is a way of blocking it.

BLOCKEDWhy? Locked Web Category: "Mixed Content/Potentially Adult"Matched categories/URL lists:

- Locked Web Categories: "Mixed Content/Potentially Adult", "Search Engines/Portals"

you can block it if you want. My question is why do they allow it. When I asked they told me the va'ad of bnei brak or something like that makes all their decisions. They do have filtering on it for example when bard says something inappropriate an error message will appear saying check your internet connection.

I guess if it filters adult content and the like so they aren't concerned. However a person has to be very careful with AI. It doesn't have Daas Torah, it doesn't quote sources, and as TAG writes the biggest problem is that it is a tool that is much more powerful than a search engine and nobody knows where it is heading. The engineers of AI already begged the government to make restrictions on AI, indicating that even they believe it to be dangerous. We will only be able to adequately assess the dangers of AI in a few years from now. If someone decides to use it then at the very least they should know that they are in potential danger and they should handle it with care.

It also blocks a lot of Torah questions for example I inputted "a dvar Torah please" and got the error message I referenced earlier Netfree works differently than other filters. It doesn't rely on algorithms and keywords to block content. All your content gets proxied through their servers and someone actually reviews each page. It is like having a big brother looking over your screen with you. They feel they can safely allow AI to be open since they can instantly block anything questionable.

boruch lets have lunch

i will pay

meet me in any jewish community on the eastern seabord

u sound like a good guy

i AS A MODERATER WILL DELET BORUCH INSULTS

i dont care how much we suffer

azoi redt men nisht

guard is humble

but he is human too

and insults hurt

hey what changed?

nothing chaneged

i stretch out my hand to boruch as i do to evryone on the forum

i just gotta prevent guard being insulted one has nothing to with the other helpfyi

u can meet me for lunch too

Here's an example where 'Bard' said somethin' inappropriate (and, as a matter of fact, t'was precisely 12 years ago) and no error message appeared.

Hello does anyone have a kosher free alternative to google maps? I need something with walking directions and it must work on a basic phone.

You should be able to get TAG or someone to install waze on your phone and it should work fine.

This is assuming that, 1) A basic phone is a flip phone, and 2) That you view Waze as Kosher.
