To clarify, you're asking about night emissions right? Yes, they are normal. They're not the most fun way to wake up (speaking from experience this happened to me for the past two nights), but it is a subconscious process. If you aren't actively fantasizing and lusting during the day and this is happening regardless, then don't pay it any mind these things come and go (with less and less frequency). I think it's helpful to make peace with our past with this types of things. We've seen what we've seen, the images are in our mind and will pop up here and there. But it's okay! You're moving forwards, two months clean is huge. Don't let this stuff get you down, it's a relic of the past.

Clarification: I meant during the day I keep feeling like maybe I'm having an emission. What do I do about it and sometimes later on that day my undergarments have a tiny stain. What do I do? Is this normal?

For a number of years after I matured, what you described above, also occurred to me. It was all part of growing up!! specifically after pushing hard in the bathroom, later on I would have an emission. I am unable to give medical advice but if you want to hear more try @Yoina mutzhoo as he seems to be very well versed in the medical field.

Yes, I read it.

It's an amazing combination of Rabbi Twerski's life mission together with a lot of insight into addiction and healing.

I can't say how they did it, but I can say ????? ????? ????? ?????? They lay down the path for you and me to have that same power too. It is ingrained in the very essence of every Jew. This is what matters to me.
