wow!

firstly i cannot ait untill i reach your stage, being free for a whole chai days!!! you need to realise the Nachos and Happines in shamayim right now, that one of their beloved sons is so far on the long road to purity.

treasure the clear mind and other amazing qualities of being free which are coming your way... as long as you go on, it will only get better and clearer (so im told as i am yet to be as great as you and reach that ammount of days free)!!!

you know know where a new relm of friends can be found, and you can turn to all stages along this long bump ride... so hold on, keep on fighting and striving!!!

Cool! Amazing! From strength to strength!

I also see that this was your very FIRST post. I know there's lotsa good stuff around the site (handbooks, groups, etc), but I'm intrigued that posting hasn't been part of your "thing." For me, it's incredibly helpful in organizing my thinking patterns and getting the feedback (ie, kick in the pants) of others.

So, as you move from 18 to 90 to 120-years, I'd encourage you to think about sharing more about what's going on in this forum. Some comments may "speak to you," and others might just be preaching to themselves, but no matter. I predict that what you put in will be less than what you get out.

So, [stroking beard, shrink-like], how ya doin' today?

For me, posting helped a lot...don't know if you've read my thread at all. It gave me a chance to open up, discuss the issues, it forced me to face myself day after day, to be aware of what was going on in my life.

Great going! We're all very, very glad to hear about your success. Keep your head up and, as a certain Chassidishe highwayman says around here, keep on trucking!!!

For clarification, by highwayman I mean that he "holds up/ robs" the yeitzer hora. Yea, I figured others would figure it out as such but I thought a little clarification would help the youngsters.
