Racking up yet another day will certainly give you a bit of chizzuk to persist. But slipping and coming out of it stronger in your recognition of how slippery you are will give real growth. It is definitely better.

There was a Jewish guy named "Frank" (really) who discovered this and began a movement to slip purposely! He and his group eventually did many horrible aveiros. They say his group was the only yiddin the Ba'al Shem Tov himself put into Cherem!!

So there are limits and perspective needed here. Hope you get my drift. Hatzlocha and KOT!!

74 days.

www.htmlbasix.com/homepage.shtml

I found a page where I can generate code to change my homepage and override my restrictions to changing it. (The default font color is #ffffff which is white and will not appear on a white background). I figured that out the hard way. I thought the link was broken because I did not see it and I wrote a whole application with the link so I can click it and make hebrewbooks.org my homepage.

Good morning anongye.

How are you.

How is your day 76?

Keep those days coming...

Personally, I don't care about your days, nor about my days. To me, numbers are silly. Today is the only day you will ever need. And that is not just a cute saying.

Clicked on a prosteh shiksah!? You bad boy, you!! What are you an addict or something?!!

Just KOT or you might get a lchayim in the eye from Reb b!!

(Translated into normal 'engalesh': "Shouldn't have, schmouldn't have!"...what's with you? What else do you expect from a person who really needs Hashem? Be glad that is all you did...really glad!!! And move forward, never backward.)

Adios! Arrivva!
