

Chaim starting over - again

Posted by chaim77 - 26 Oct 2010 21:39

I am feeling so broken and distraught as I write this. I feel at a complete loss. I have struggled with this addiction and fought it for 20 years and it has beaten me again and again. I had 18 months of sobriety ending with a slip this past April. Now I struggle to get through one day without acting out.

Yet with all that I am so grateful I have found this site and this community. I have tasted extended sobriety. I believe that I can get back there, but right now I feel like I'm buried in a tunnel. I can't think. I can hardly focus. i can hardly even sit up and type this. All I can do is to groan from the depths of my broken heart. Help me, Father in Heaven! Please help me! I have nothing left. I can't fight this anymore. Not one more day. It's got me beat.

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by installed - 06 Dec 2010 16:57

Wow, deleting facebook is huge. I would like to delete my account as well but I'm concerned that people will think that I'm becoming an extremist for doing so. Will you give an explanation to anybody or will you just disappear (people may think that you've removed them)?

I'm glad that you are still doing well.

Happy chanukah.

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by KiviYVY - 06 Dec 2010 17:49

You could always give the excuse that you're closing it because of security reasons, meaning identity theft, etc. That's a common reason for people to remove their facebook accounts.

=====

====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by desperate_teddybear - 06 Dec 2010 18:34

i deleted my facebook about 1/2 a year ago i just posted up that a rabbi told me to remove it, then about a week later i took it down.

u could do that: just post ur deleting ur account 4 security reasons, post ur email address if they'd like to keep in contact and ask for whoever wants to send u THEIR email. and then ur not insulting nobody ur just leaving...

=====

====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by chaim77 - 06 Dec 2010 19:22

My plan is to delete it without any excuse or notification. First off, my account has been dormant since I put my filter in about 2 months ago. Second, I was never too active a user to begin with. 3rd the people I'm really friends with on Facebook, I'm friends with in real life. The potential for abuse of my private information is profound too. The more I learn about the Facebook founders and their frivolous view of privacy the more concerned I become. 4th, I'm kind of a luddite and always have been since I've been a kid.

Now I never used Facebook for acting out purposes; I understand that Facebook is a problem for some others in this regard. Maybe that's why I also don't feel a lot of resistance to shutting down the account as well, because it hasn't been a vehicle for the Y'H.

I'm 33 years old, so I'm not really a digital generation/millennial. I could understand that facebook is really a lifeline for a lot of people to connect and is a primary people for younger people to connect. My little sister is just 4 years younger, but has a much greater penetration of social media in her life. I look at it this way. I live in a community where there is always something going on. Some learning event or minyan man basketball tournament, some rav coming through town plus I have work and chavrusas etc. Do I really need to connect digitally beyond e-mail? I have every opportunity to do so in real life. I also live in a smaller frum community so all the mores so for those of us in NY or NJ.

My plan is to hit the public computer at the library to see if I can delete

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by Eye.nonymous - 06 Dec 2010 20:30

David/Rage wrote on 06 Dec 2010 19:53:

congrats for choosing to get rid of fb...i deleted my fb account long before i started working on my shmiras enayim....you see, EVERYONE and their grandma is on fb now...i realized it was not the place to be when my aunt betsy got fb...im like, im not sure i wanna be part of a social network that includes my aunt betsy....for the sake of humanity, get rid of fb...

NOW THAT SOUNDS LIKE RAGE!

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by chaim77 - 06 Dec 2010 22:20

I successfully de-activated Facebook. I'll have to have friend test it out. Does anyone know if there is a way to completely delete an account? Will I be invisible now to my ex's?

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by installed - 07 Dec 2010 12:50

Hey Chaim77,

Apparently, you can't delete an account but just deactivate it. In other words, they keep all your info and there is no way for you to delete it. They do this in order to give you the opportunity to reactivate at a later date.

Guys, thanks for the suggestions, I'll use the security excuse. If you see some guy deleting his Happy chanukah.

=====

Day 29

Posted by chaim77 - 07 Dec 2010 16:14

Installed - that's interesting/diabolical that Facebook won't let you delete an account. The cost of privacy goes up all the time.

account for security reasons, you'll know my identity

Today is day 29 and an okay day. I'll make it through but I am aware that I really need to grow as a man in recovery. Yesterday evening I was less than satisfied with my shemirat anayim. There was a real victory. I had to go to an office building and in the receptionist area there was a woman who dressed to get gawked at and was being checked out by a few guys waiting behind her. I was able to take care of my business without even directly looking at her and getting all worked up. Last night I took my kids to an indoor playground that is part of a city rec center/ health club. It wasn't terrible, but I wasn't pleased with myself either. I really need to have game plan and be talking with the Boss before I go back there. This morning I was a little annoyed taking care of health insurance stuff. I'm still on COBRA since leaving my old job to start this business but that runs off in Oct 2011 and I'm shopping for my individual policy. I would have done this earlier but we had a baby this summer and we couldn't start the insurance shopping until the baby was 3 months old. First off the process is stressful. Second off I'm terrified about what this is going to cost. There's a lot of RID built into it. B"H the new 12 step calls sart in 6 short days.

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by silentbattle - 07 Dec 2010 17:32

Depending on how much you're making, you might want to look into "healthy NY" (or an equivalent program wherever you live). You might also be able to look into getting insurance through an organization - I never fully looked into it, but you might want to research getting insurance through the freelancer's union. Probably WAY cheaper than getting it by yourself (I mean like, by a factor of 4).

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by desperate_teddybear - 08 Dec 2010 10:22

u know even if u cant delete ur account b4 deactivating u can still change all the info on record

=====

Day 30 - Hitting some turbulence, but B'H it doesn't have to be a tailspin

Posted by chaim77 - 08 Dec 2010 15:15

Here's the scoop on day 30. Last week, as the clouds of acute withdrawal lifted, I was really too happy. Everything seemed beautiful, sunny and full of hope. All the lights were green in every direction. I was opening up books right to the page I wanted. I was getting all these epiphanies. This week is harder. Yesterday I was at an even for my kid's school; people were shmoozing and I just felt like crying. I just felt low - I couldn't identify anything in particular but it hurt. I felt better later that night. I got a workout in and was able to sit and just look at the chanukah candles for a good while - something I hadn't taken the time to do yet. I wondered about what the next year will bring and where we will all be next chanukah. I also just enjoyed gazing at the light of the fire, of each flame clinging to it's wick but pulling upwards.

Last night I had a dream about acting out. I can't tell you the relief when I woke up and it was just a dream. And this morning, acting out is on the brain. I am really trying to surrender it to Hashem. I know that as powerful as my urge may seem, it is nothing compared to his urge. I can't identify anything in particular that is bothering me. Rather it seems to be all of it – my work, my family, my volunteer commitments, my finances, my health – the whole thing. I know that my urge will pass. I have been praying that Hashem help me to be calm now and at least just do something in a calm and productive manner until He can show me how to untangle all the knots in my life or at least to live with them. Life hurts now, and I want to act out. But I know that it will hurt worse and I need to hang in there, this feeling will pass and more will be revealed. I am committed to being sober today. I know not all days will feel as bad as the last couple. This is white-knuckling at its finest, but if I can make it through today, more will be revealed. I've seen it before in myself and with the others in this program. In 5 days the next 12 step calls start.

I think in the Joe and Charlie mp3's the talk about how when you quit drinking you're going to feel better – you're going to feel pain better, resentment better, fear better, worry better and so on – b'emet.

I'm going to go get busy for a while. I have some time set up to talk to another guy in a little bit. I'm already feeling a little bit better.

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by ZemirosShabbos - 08 Dec 2010 16:11

chaim, i feel for you. having the urge and the unexplained discontentment.

but you sound like you have some pretty good perspective and tools for pulling through this and growing by it. maybe it all boils down to talking: talking to yourself, talking to friends, and talking

i liked this idea a lot:chaim77 wrote on 08 Dec 2010 15:15:

I also just enjoyed gazing at the light of the fire, of each flame clinging to it's wick but pulling upwards.

=====

=====

Day 31 - Does anyone else ever get the "one last time's"

Posted by chaim77 - 09 Dec 2010 17:12

This morning was a rough morning. B"H I had a lot to keep me busy, but my wheels started turning in a very bad way on my too long commute this morning. I regret to say that I googled a video store on my smartphone that I have frequent to see what time the open – I have no filter on my phone, but I have disabled images which is good. Just in case anyone is wondering, they opened 45 minutes ago and I wasn't there when they unlocked the doors. Thank G-d I was working and actually getting somethings done. I got myself into a very perilous situation this morning. The Yetzer Hara's tactic - the one last time bit...

I've always been a sucker for the one last time routine. "Come on – one last time. You start the next 12-step calls on Monday and then you'll be sorry you didn't." "This time it will be enough, I promise."

So let me tell you all again how this thing has almost cost me a great job, an awesome marriage, my finances, my health and so on. I've put myself in situations where I've risked disease, getting beat up or mugged and jail to chase this illusion. Let me tell you that when I come to act out – these painful memories are no where to be found; they hold no power over me whatsoever. Can anyone relate? Is this not the insanity we are talking about – the powerlessness?

So no the Y"H is telling me that – "you already googled the hours of operation for the store, and crossed that line. You blew it, you might as well go the whole hog." And thank G-d that he looks for us progress and not perfection. Now for today I need to look at myself for progress and not perfection.

So how did I even get in a conversation with the Y"H this morning? It is clear that I am out of touch spiritually. I've popped out of gear and I'm revving my engine and must be feeling stuck. I need to be talking to Hashem more. If I'm busy talking to HKB"H how can I be having a conversation with the Y"H!!!

Here's the last bit the Y"H tries to pull. "Look, Chaim, you are so full of RID and triggery right now. How are you going to last until the calls start on Monday? Look the way that things are going now, you're just going to feel worse and worse and worse." B"H I don't have to make it until Monday. So I may feel worse tomorrow or I may not. I'll deal with that when I get there. One thing is for sure, I will feel worse if I act out today. The mitzvah today is to stay sober today.

It was scary for me to write this just now. I was thinking, do I want to really write this in the condition I'm in? Look, you may act out later today and then you'll look stupid. That's true; there is a lot of day left. But I'm not acting out right now, and I'm trying to be honest with myself. I might slip even more than just googling hours of operations. So I am feeling very vulnerable, very scared, but also strangely serene that I am able to lay out in such honest terms.

Mine won't, G-d's will – I think I'll let him. And it seems my knuckles are a little less white.

By the way if anyone knows how to put a filter or accountability program on a Palm Centro – let me know!

=====

Re: Chaim starting over - again

Posted by ZemirosShabbos - 09 Dec 2010 17:41

hi Chaim,

remember that when Yosef had his nisayon with Mrs.Potifar Chazal say that he 'fell' to a certain extent, with zera being lost from his fingers. yet he picked himself up and ran and became known as Yosef Hatzadik for posterity because of that and by doing so he bequeathed that potential power for all of klal yisrael, as the seforim say. if he would have been hung up on being perfect he would've ended up who-knows-where.

you did great by coming and posting about it. put it out in the open. you have great ideas and attitudes. do you have people you can call?

=====

====